

BIBLIOGRAPHY: FIRST NATIONS CULTURE & PLANNING

This bibliography is the result of my independent research over a three-year period and are relevant to my exploration of the relationship between culture and the built environment. I have researched a wide range of literature across issues such as Cultural Literacy, First Nations culture, Multiculturalism and Interculturalism, culturally sensitive urban planning and design, understanding the impacts of planning and design decisions on a community's cultural life and other related subject areas.

The following listing of articles and publications of relevance to the discourse on the theory and practice relating to the need for urban planners and designers to understand the aspirations and needs of Australia's First Nations People, is by no means an exhaustive list. It does however provide an insight into the relevant academic and non-academic material I found during my research and will be updated as I discover further relevant material or in response to recommendations from visitors to the website. I have made every effort to ensure the works are accurately attributed but apologise to authors if there are inaccuracies and will make corrections if advised via the Feedback page.
